hangout@jonker opens in Malacca

Hangout Hotels brings its unique hotel accommodation concept to Malaysia

Hangout Hotels' second outlet – hangout@jonker, will officially open to travellers on 3 July 2010 in Malacca, Malaysia. The 22-room boutique hotel is located in the Jonker Area, a popular, must-go destination for tourists visiting Malacca.

Similar to hangout@mt.emily in Singapore, hangout@jonker is Hangout Hotel's second boutique hotel development to adopt its signature concept of "no frills, just fun accommodation", offering affordable lodging in a simple and fun environment that does not compromise on cleanliness, comfort, and safety for its guests. A treasure find for the savvy travellers, the new boutique hotel is housed within a four-storey heritage building and is designed with a clean, modern and chic interior.

Mr Jay Ang, designer-architect of hangout@jonker, says, "This being a conservation building with a rich heritage to be preserved, changes to the façade and interiors of the building were kept to the minimum. The floors of the ground level and main lobby are in cement screed and the walls are exposed bricks painted in white to reflect the old charm of the conservation building. The furniture in the lobby are in lime green and red to give a touch of color to the minimalist interior. The rooms at hangout@jonker are modern and minimalist: splashes of the colors green, red, and blue are used in rooms on different levels for a twist and adds some life to the all-white interior."

hangout@jonker offers single, twin, double, or triple rooms with comfortable beds and attached bathrooms. The hotel's Veg Out lounge provides guests with a common area to meet fellow travellers and share adventure tales over a cup of coffee or tea. (Please refer to attached fact sheet for full list of facilities)

In addition, hangout@jonker contributes RM1 per room stay to three local charities in Malacca in a bid to give back to society.
